

	MEAM Transition Planning: questions for local partners (excludes Qs to national govt etc)			Are all key players involved? Who needs adding?	Can we set a target to sort it?
		What do we already have?	What do we need to add / overcome?
	Question 1: Do we know what people need and want?
1.1	Have people currently facing multiple disadvantage been integral to shaping the emergency service offer that they are receiving now?
1.2	Are actions being taken to support those who are struggling to cope in the new environments and to re-welcome those who may have left?
1.3	Has everyone had a review of their strengths, needs, aspirations, health, housing, finances and entitlements, leading to a clear personalised plan for future support and success?
1.4	Are mechanisms being put in place so that people facing multiple disadvantage can help shape the transition plans and the longer-term future, with a focus on providing what people want and need?
1.5	How can local areas update government and other areas on the actions they are taking to involve people with lived experience?
	Question 2: Do we have cross-sector leadership?
2.1	Is there a clear commitment from senior cross-sector leaders that this is an opportunity to take a system-wide approach?
2.2	Is there a structure in which cross-sector discussions can be had about what needs to happen next, and are these groups meeting?
2.3	Is anyone missing from this forum and how can they be involved? Have people facing multiple disadvantage been meaningfully included in the process?
2.4	Is there space for people to have honest and open discussions, and to take a 'system-wide' view of the opportunity that is presented?
2.5	Is there a willingness for transition plans to be publically available and shaped by local expertise?

	Question 3: How can we maintain and expand flexible responses from housing, substance misuse, health, mental health and criminal justice services?
3.1	Has there been a discussion about what is working well in the crisis-response environment and what is not, including the views of people experiencing multiple disadvantage?
3.2	Is there a clear sense of what the flexibilities have been, which you and your beneficiaries want to keep, and how this can be achieved? What further flexibilities might be beneficial? Do any restrictions that have emerged need to be addressed?
3.3	Is there a clear plan in place to maintain and develop these flexibilities into the future? What is needed to achieve this?
	Question 4: Do we have appropriate accommodation?
4.1	Has everyone had a full review of their accommodation needs and a preferred option identified? A full range of options should be available including social, private, supported and Housing First.
4.2	Does the preferred housing option identified for individuals take full account of their individual circumstances and needs, including their mental and physical health?
4.3	Has a review of current housing availability against this demand been undertaken, with the gap identified and costed?
4.4	Has a clear case been made to government about the cost of meeting this gap, in partnership with local housing and support providers?
4.5	Has the review considered support (revenue) needs as well as housing needs?
4.6	Does the preferred housing option for people have some flexibility in the future if required?
